GENERAL NEWS.

General Celebration of the Anniversary of Lincoln's Birthday.

DEATH OF C. W. STEVENS, BUILDER OF OREGON'S FIRST RAILROAD

Star Route Trials Commenced in Nebraska—Workmen at Pullman Car Works near Chicago Strike for Free Rides

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb 14.—At the weekly meeting of Methodist ministers to-day a committee to whom the subject of polygamy had been referred made a report calling attention to the fact that polygamy was rapidly increasing and spreading, and after denouncing the evil and appealing to congress to suppress it suggests that the territorial government of Utah and probably other territories where polygamists are said to hold the balance of power should be abolished and another form of government provided that will more effectually reach the cause. The report was discussed at considerable length and the following resolution adopted supplementary thereto

Resolved That we respectfully invite the attention of the executive authorities at Washington to the relations of European emigration procured by Mormon emissaries to the continuance and enlargement of this great evil, and we suggest careful enquiry whether more effective measures may not be taken to anticipate and prevent this constant supply of this organized iniquity

The report was then adopted

Strike at Pullman.

The determination of the Pullman palace car authorities at Pullman that workmen at their shops would have to pay ten cents per day for rides to and from work into Chicago has aroused a decided feeling of hostility. Heretofore transportation has been furnished free to employes at an expense of $8000 per month and it was held too great an expense. To-day when the company announced the pay system the carpenters and painters immediately struck and gathering several hundred workmen repaired to the market square and held an orderly meeting. Several speeches were made and a committee appointed who waited on the manager. He met them kindly and frankly, but told them there was little likelihood that the company would recede from its position on the fare question though willing to oblige the men on all other points, that the company had already paid out $200,000 for the transportation of its employes and were willing still to pay half the cost. The result of the interview was reported to the meeting, which forthwith decided on a general strike unless Mr Johnson, of the Pullman company, would rescind the fare order. They managed to form a union and to-morrow's developments will probably determine whether a strike shall ensue

Lincoln Anniversary.

NEW YORK, Feb 13.—The Lincoln Club celebrated to-night the 73d anniversary of the birthday of President Lincoln. Gen Grant, Emery A. Storrs, Senator McDonald and Gov Cornell were among the guests. Gen Grant in a speech said he never saw Mr Lincoln till March 1864. "I like the name of the club because it bears the name of the greatest man whom this country has every produced." Mr. Storrs said Abraham Lincoln was a typical American citizen. He led the republican party in its first vigorous, bright days, when it did not tamper with wrong and knew no half-breed in its ranks. [Cheers and cries of "306."] It was a party fired by freedom and there could be no cross in such stock

Railroad Troubles.

NEW YORK, Feb 14.—The Graphic's special from Winnipeg, Manitoba, says the Southwestern railway trouble is still increasing. Blanchard, on behalf of Hugh Sutherland, has entered suit against Schulz, Pew and others, original shareholders of the company, to recover $125,000, which Pew and Schulz are alleged to have received from Villard. Another lawsuit has also been entered by Biggs for the Oregon Transportation Company as assignees for Villard, against Pew, Brown and Schulz, to recover from the two former 308 shares of stock of the Southwestern, which it is alleged that Pew holds as agent for Villard and refuses to transfer to him

Star Route Trial in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Feb. 14.—The star route case opened to-day with Fred E. Cleary, postmaster of Sidney, on the stand. He refused to testify lest he might criminate himself. Prosecution spent the greater part of the forenoon arguing to compel Cleary to testify. The court overruled the attempt as Cleary was one of the conspirators indicted. The testimony of persons who traveled the Sidney and Deadwood route at the time covered by the indictments and also of the Deadwood postmaster, were taken. It is thought the case will go to the jury Saturday.

Failures at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb 14.—The following failures are posted at the Cotton Exchange to-day: Samuel H Buck & Co, Henry Hentz of New York, Henry Legendre & Son and Henry N Martiro, all cotton brokers and buyers who transacted business through the future rooms of the Cotton Exchange. The rules of the Cotton Exchange require margins to be kept up from day to day, consequently the failure of any firm or individual can only entail a loss on those dealing to day

Troublesome Rains in Texas.

MINEOLA, Texas, Feb 14.—The recent great storm is apparently abating. Two bridges on the Texas Pacific eastern division were washed away and trains stopped. Orders have been issued to hold all trains except on the Missouri Pacific at Dallas to-night. Washouts are reported on the Texas Central at Chambers' creek, and the running of trains is temporarily abandoned. Great damage is caused and much delay to all Texas trains

A Desperado Arrested.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 14.—The mysterious Dave, whose real name is David Mathews, and one of the worst desperadoes in the southwest, was identified on the street this morning and arrested on a charge of stealing $200 worth of jewelry and valuables. Several rewards are offered for him for murder and highway robbery in Kansas, Colorado and New Mexico. Officials have been notified of his arrest

Death of an Oregon Pioneer.

NEW YORK, Feb 14.—Chas W. Stevens, formerly of San Francisco, died yesterday at 105 East Twenty-seventh street, where he has been living for the past four months with his family. Stevens was a civil engineer and master mechanic. He built the first locomotive run in California and superintended the building of the first railroad in Oregon.

A Literary Character Dead.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Daniel Slote, a well known blank book manufacturer and the "Dan" of Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad," died yesterday in this city at the house of his mother, whom he was visiting.

Caucus Doings.

RICHMOND, Feb 14.—In caucus the bolting readjusters agreed to abide by the decision of the caucus. There was some excitement over the denunciation of Massey by Riddleberger. Massey's friends left the caucus, which at 12 10 A. M. renominated S Brown Allen auditor in place of Massey, and adjourned

Mexican Murders.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb 14.—Advices from Salinas, Mex., state that an old man named Allen, a sub-contractor on the Sunset road, Chas. Bowers and Fred Douglass were murdered in their camp on the night of Feb 2d, between Villa Leos and Lampoo. They had just received their pay

Suspended.

ST. LOUIS, Feb 14.—Stephen A. Bemis, who has been on the long side of cotton and wheat lately failed to meet a demand for more margins to-day and was forced to suspend. His liabilities will not exceed $60,000, and he hopes to settle claims against him in a short time

California Wheat for St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Feb 14.—Eight cars of California wheat passed through El Paso, Texas, to-day enroute for St. Louis via the Southern and Texas Pacific roads. This is part of the 40,000 bushels of California wheat recently purchased by St. Louis millers

Young Scoundrels.

KANSAS CITY, Feb 14.—Three young fellows not over 18 years of age, were arrested to-night near Rock Creek in this county charged with attempting to wreck the Missouri Pacific west bound train. They were all heavily armed and masked Suspended Students.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb 14.—Three students of Williston Seminary at Easthampton were suspended for hazing yesterday. Two upper classes refuse to attend recitations till they are reinstated but the faculty are firm

High Water in the Hudson.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb 14.—Ice on the Hudson is breaking up to-night. A grain elevator opposite the city is reported carried away. Ice is gorged at Dow's point and the water of the Hudson is over its banks here

Damaging Overflows.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb 14.—The steamer Mil. Davis from the overflowed section of the St. Francis river reports great damage. This boat is removing families and stock to safe places

High Water at Petersburg.

PETERSBURG, Va., Feb 14.—High water has stopped all mills and caused much damage here

Edmunds asked for a vote upon his motion to take up the anti-polygamy bill and after an arrangement which entitles Call to retain the floor for a speech to-morrow on pensions the motion prevailed and the bill was taken up and laid over as next business in order after Call shall have finished his remarks. Edmunds said he hoped the senate would be able to sit it out to-morrow so as to dispose of the bill before adjournment

A bill was introduced by Call to exempt vessels of less than 25 tons in the waters of the United States and not engaged in transportation of passengers from inspection and license

Morgan offered a resolution which was referred, requesting the president to bring to the attention of the government of Nicaragua the necessity for arranging by a convention for the final settlement of all unadjusted claims existing between the United States and Nicaragua and of citizens of either of such governments against the other. Senate adjourned

The military committee is considering the allegation against Major Rochester, paymaster general of the army

The committee of public lands discussed at length a resolution to instruct the attorney general to defend titles to western homesteads which are claimed by railroad companies to have been included in land grants to them. This resolution involves directly lands included in the recent decision of Judge Miller at Omaha, but indirectly it touches titles of many other homesteads. The question is whether entries made upon land included in railroad grants before that land was formally and finally withdrawn by the government are good or not. Senator Plumb stated that he knew at least five hundred cases where this question entered into the title, and that there were hundreds of other cases. The committee did not come to any conclusion

House.

Orth, of the committee on foreign affairs reported adversely a resolution originally offered by Robinson of New York calling on the attorney general as to whether if Joseph Warren Keifer, Alonzo B Cornell or Charles Carroll should be arrested in the British empire without having committed any crime, the English government by suspending the writ of habeas corpus could lawfully detain them on indefinite suspicion without trial or without the right of the United States to demand his release. House refused to lay the resolution on the table, 71 to 79

Robinson, of New York, desired to debate the resolution, but the speaker held the pending motion to lay upon the table, was not debatable. The resolution was tabled by a vote of yeas 1..., nays 107

Orth reported adversely the resolution requesting the president to communicate all correspondence with the British government on file in the state department in reference to the case of O'Connor a citizen of the United States now imprisoned in Ireland. Orth stated the papers referred to already had been asked for by a previous resolution of the house

The motion to recommit the resolution regarding imprisonment of Americans in English prisons was carried with an amendment to include the names of Michael Hart, H. O. Mahoney and John McEnery with O'Connor's appointment. The bill was taken up but the confusion was so great the house adjourned.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC LAND GRANT

The following statement is from the late U. S. railroad commissioner

The Washington correspondent, as well as the editor of the New York World in sundry articles have recently taken occasion—not without malice but with a seeming affectation of indignation and horror—to animadvert on and denounce what they choose to denominate the "Northern Pacific Job." If either of the gentlemen actually knew anything of that which they have been talking about their vaporings might call for more extended or serious consideration than we are disposed to accord them

The public at large having, probably more interest in the Northern Pacific than in any other of the Pacific companies—Union Central Texas or Southern—for that reason the value of the property no doubt, deeply concerns them. There are about nine thousand shareholders in the Northern Pacific largely made up of persons who were originally bondholders—creditors—and who have been waiting patiently for the completion of the road to see the success of their great enterprise assured

Holders of the shares of the Northern Pacific must not permit themselves to be frightened by these efforts of buncombe politicians or stock jobbing correspondents and editors, for to one or other of these must this raid be relegated!

A careful reading and study of the laws relating to the Northern Pacific, and an experience of some years, lead me to make the following statements, viz

First—By section three of the charter act of July 2d, 1864, congress absolutely granted to the Northern Pacific railroad company twenty alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said road through the territories and ten through the states

Second—By section nine of the same act, congress can only interpose to do any and all things necessary to insure a speedy completion of the road. The grant can never be diverted from its purpose or these vested rights interfered with

Third—By a resolution of both houses of congress—of the same force as an act of congress—approved May 31st 1870, the Northern Pacific railroad company was authorized to issue bonds, and mortgage all its property and rights of property (including its franchise as a corporation), to secure the same. The company having done this congress is absolutely estopped from any interference other than to push on the work. As a still more effective estoppel, the second section of this very resolution says "Congress may at any time alter or amend this joint resolution, having due regard to the rights of said company and any other parties

The case is a completed one—cannot be reopened—and no decision of a secretary of the interior or land commissioner on questions of route, or time, or patents for lands, can deprive the company of its property

It is proper to state that these raids whether political or gambling have had little or no effect on the price of the securities and stock of the company

WEST INDIES.

Arrested to Save his Life.

HAVANA, Feb 14.—The Revista Economica, a Sunday journal has been denounced by a court of law and its editors arrested on account of virulent articles written in a controversy with a conservative journal which threatened to lead to a disturbance of the peace. The conservative right had instigated a political passion against the editor of the Revista and his arrest was a matter of precaution as his life was in danger

Southern Railroads.

San Francisco Bulletin

Arrangements for the immediate construction of the Atlantic & Pacific railroad from Mohave station on the Southern Pacific railroad situated at the head of Mohave desert eastward to the Colorado river, have been completed. Mohave station is exactly one hundred miles from Los Angeles, and is now the depot for the Cerro Gordo mines in Inyo county. It lies close to the thirty fifth parallel, which the Atlantic & Pacific railroad will follow. In accordance with these arrangements a dispatch was received this morning by Charles Crocker president of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company from Leland Stanford and C. P. Huntington at New York, requesting him to proceed at once with the construction of the road as stated. The point at which the road shall cross the Colorado river is left open to be designated and agreed upon by officers of the Southern Pacific and the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Companies. It is scarcely open to doubt however, that The Needles will be the place of crossing

Mr Crocker at once had a contract drawn up and signed for the construction of the road. Subsequently arrangements were made for five hundred Chinese laborers and a large number of skilled workmen all of whom will be sent to the scene of railroad building immediately. The distance between Mohave station and The Needles is about three hundred miles

The Columbia River Receives a Tribute from Senator Slater.

JOHN C. NEW NOMINATED ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

Spreckles' Hawaiian Sugar Being Liable to be Dealt with in Violation of the Customs Law

[illegible] ... the United States has ... [illegible] ... Hawaiian ... free and in return they have the privilege ... [illegible] ... treaty is a harmless enough document upon its face but if it was not concerted in the interest of Spreckels it has been turned wholly to his advantage. I had almost given up hopes of defending New York sugar dealers against the monopoly when some gentlemen from San Francisco whose citizens by the way are not benefited by this peculiar kind of free trade informed me that refined sugars were not imported into San Francisco prior to the treaty and what was known in markets of the Pacific coast at that time as Sandwich Island sugar was unrefined and of low grade. This gave me the suggestion and upon examining statistics I found that about 90 per cent of all sugar imported from Sandwich Islands since the treaty was of higher grade than what was then known as Sandwich Island sugar and consequently was liable to duty

This bill if it becomes a law will subject all the refined sugars imported from the Hawaiian kingdom to a regular duty and the importer of every pound of refined sugar heretofore imported free under the treaty will have to disgorge. To the suggestion that in event of passage of the bill Spreckles would import his sugar in an unrefined state and prepare it for market in this country Hardy replied that he may do so but he will then have to lose the benefit of the machinery which he has erected on the islands and the cheap labor which he employs there, and besides the freight will be greater. If the bill passes I do not think the treaty will afterward be very profitable to the sugar monopoly. It is understood that Spreckles has a lobby at work and that he will make every effort sparing neither time nor expense, to defeat the bill. It is believed it will be buried in committee if possible

Diplomatic Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Feb 14.—The Commercial's Washington special says: The president sent to congress to-day the correspondence relating to the proposed congress of republics of North and South America on the 22d of November next in Washington. The most important letter transmitted is one from Minister Logan to Blaine under date of Dec 16. Logan says he hopes to secure the unanimous cooperation of the countries to which he is accredited, but that the affair must be managed with discretion as three of the five states are determined to accomplish the union of all under one government. These three states are the least, Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras and perhaps Costa Rica also may consider the invitation as practically if not an intended defeat of their purposes. Logan says he is not clear as to being able to obtain the genuine cooperation of all the Central American states, but each will probably ultimately agree to send a commissioner and assume outwardly the appearance of sincere cooperation. While all will probably send commissioners through motives of expediency they may possibly be instructed to secretly defeat the ends of the convention as a means of restraining the aggressive tendency of Mexico in the direction of Central America. The congress would be attended by the happiest results should a full agreement be reached, just as the Central American states are now in a chaotic condition and considered with their future states wholly unfixed it now appears, through the operations of military forces that the hope of a ... union in South America would be crushed at least in the immediate present. Another letter included in the ... is one from Venezuela also accepting the invitation with gratitude and one from Mexico of a non committal character

The minister of foreign affairs at Venezuela also writes: The conception of a peace congress bears with it the assurance of its accomplishment by the influence of the government which undertakes to carry it into effect so there is sufficient ground to hope that on this occasion efforts for suppression of war between countries of the American continent will not be frustrated. If this is attained the example will extend its influence to other hemispheres and the world will behold disappearance of this calamity and will establish in its place for comfort of humanity and add an evident mark of progress to the practice of respect for lives and property of men linked by fraternal intercourse

Discussing Army Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Feb 14.—In executive session of the senate to-day the nomination of Major Rochester to be paymaster general of the army was after brief discussion recommitted to the committee on military affairs for examination of certain charges to the effect that he was guilty of gross neglect of duty in allowing Major Hodge, the defaulting Washington paymaster a number of years ago to turn over to him an unverified account of money then nominally in Hodge's possession, instead of requiring the money to be counted and delivered. It was stated to-day that the receipt then given by Rochester to Hodge although outstanding only a day or two, enabled Hodge to obtain a bond for a new term and thereby increase his defalcations ultimately to the amount of nearly double the shortage which existed at the expiration of his first bond. The nomination of Col. Rucker as quartermaster general, although confirmed without extended debate, gave rise to considerable criticism on the ground that it provided for placing an officer 70 years of age in a position which has just been made vacant by reason of Gen Meigs having attained the age of 65. It was generally conceded that Col Rucker's long and faithful services both in the line and staff of the army and the fact that he stood next to Gen Meigs in order of promotion, entitled him to special consideration, with a view to his being hereafter retired on the rank of brigadier general

Polygamy Bill.

Representative Willetts of Michigan to-day submitted to the house a bill heretofore agreed upon by the house judiciary committee to prevent persons living in bigamy or polygamy from holding any civil office of trust or profit in any of the territories of the United States and from being delegates in congress. Accompanying the bill is a report which declares no person shall under authority of congress hold office who violates statutes that are justified and demanded by the positive sentiment of civilization. In conclusion the report says it matters not in our judgment that this violation is excused or defended under guise of religion. Your committee recognize the fact that this bill falls far short of what the country justly demands and that in many respects we as representatives of the nation will fail in our duty if we do not prosecute measures looking to a more radical treatment of an evil which has in the last fifty years intrenched itself in our political system. We propose to supplement this with other propositions that may perhaps elicit opposition as too radical but which in our judgment are absolutely necessary and these propositions are being considered by the committee. In the meantime we propose this measure which is practical in its character and likely to pass without any considerable dissent, and we hope will so commend itself to congress that it may speedily become a law

A Congressional Ruction.

A resolution was reported by Orth in the house to-day asking for information as to the cause of imprisonment in Ireland of D. H. O'Connor, which gave rise to quite an interesting discussion which at times took a personal turn. Robinson of New York in commenting upon the necessity of the American congress taking steps to release American citizens from English prisons, took occasion to make some reflection upon Robeson of New Jersey and that gentleman in turn made a bitter speech in which he applied to Robinson the epithet demagogue, and intimated that he had been mendacious in his statements. Contested Elections.

The case of Smyth against Roberts from the sixth Louisiana district will be dismissed by the committee at its session to-morrow. This with the ... case of ... against ... in the ... and ... [illegible] ... contestant does not claim to have received an actual majority of votes put into ballot boxes, the claim only being made that ... Contestants however in each of the above cases will file a memorial asserting that sitting members should be unseated because of improper and illegal practices at elections. The same course will be pursued as to several other contests which will be in turn dismissed by the committee on elections

Utah Delegateship.

The committee on elections of the house to-night considered the Campbell-Cannon contest and another session is appointed for to-morrow morning at which it is expected a decision will be reached. The opinion generally expressed is that the committee will report in favor of sending the election back to the people. It is doubtful if such a report will be accepted by the house. Many of the best lawyers in that body are agreed that the fact of Cannon's polygamous record is not ground upon which the house can legally deny him admission while it is quite within the province of the house to expel him on that account, urged that should he now go back to the people he would undoubtedly be re-elected by as large a majority as before, and the result would be rather to add to his power and popularity in the territory. Should he however be first seated and then by a two-thirds vote be expelled he could not again be admitted to the present house, if precedents are followed nor probably to any subsequent house

The Columbia Advertised.

Senator Slater delivered a well prepared speech in the senate to-day on the subject of need for liberal appropriations for improvement of the Columbia river. He gave a concise description of the resources and commerce of the Columbia river basin and brought into striking contrast the great difference between rates of freight on the Mississippi and Erie canal and those charged by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. From these statistics he deducted his argument in favor of large appropriations for the speedy completion of the canal at the Cascades and other improvements to free this region from the grasp of the present monopoly. He also specially advocated the improvement of Yaquina bay with a view of making the Oregon Pacific railroad now in process of construction from that harbor, an effective competing line

Comment on Nominations.

The nomination of Moses N. Drew of Sacramento as U. S. marshal for California, and Hiram Van Arnam of Oakland as secretary of Arizona territory foreshadowed several months ago in dispatches, were sent to the senate to-day and will promptly be confirmed

John C. New, who has to-day been nominated as assistant secretary of the treasury, was General Gilfillan's successor as U. S. treasurer and during the last presidential contest was the efficient chairman of the Indiana campaign committee. He is owner of the Indianapolis Journal and ever since Garfield's election has been spoken of for a federal appointment, the last position for which he was booked being the mission to Russia

A Boom for Yaquina.

The house committee on commerce to-day unanimously agreed to report favorably on bill introduced by Representative George (of Oregon) to create a new customs district of that part of the Oregon coast lying between Suislaw and Salmon rivers with Yaquina as its port of entry. The bill has also been endorsed by the secretary of the treasury and its passage is practically assured

A Lengthy Petition.

WASHINGTON, Feb 14.—A memorial is here more than 100 feet long and signed by merchants, manufacturers, mechanics, farmers, taxpayers and others of nearly every state in the union which will be presented to the ways and means committee and asks that the tax on bank deposits and two cent stamps on checks and drafts be abolished

Control of the Cascades Locks.

WASHINGTON, Feb 14.—Ferry of Michigan introduced a bill in the house directing the secretary of war to assume full care and control and charge of tolls of the canal around the cascades of the Columbia river in Oregon and all other canals, locks and harbors of refuge hereafter built by the United States for improvement of navigation

Gen. Carr Released.

While the president declines to order a court martial it is understood he nevertheless disapproves certain utterances of Gen Carr as a subordinate. No further action will be taken in the case

The Utah Case Opened.

The committee on elections to-day began hearing the arguments in the contested election case of Campbell vs Cannon, from Utah. McBride appeared as attorney for Campbell and Gen. Payne represented Cannon. The committee will hold an evening session for the purpose of hearing further arguments

Scoville's Dream.

Scoville is hard at work on his bill of exceptions which he thinks he can prepare in a week. These districts are scattered from one end of the county to the other—nearly one hundred and fifty miles. We always favor paying officials well for their labor, that thus the best talent can be secured. The laborer is worthy of his hire. "306."

From the Astorian

Each of the "immortal" 306 who voted for Grant at the Chicago convention, twenty months ago, has received a bronze medal weighing one pound, on which there is a profile of the object of their adoration, and some motto about the "old guard." If the old soldiers who fought with Grant should prepare such a device, it would be in excellent taste and would command admiration, but under the present circumstances this exhibition of strained devotion to an individual is in bad taste, and is a significant and unpleasant sign of possible danger in the future. Gen Grant does not represent any ideas or principles which could rally around him a personal following, unless it be one of prospective spoils. Those who have been fighting his political battles are not engaged in a struggle to secure the recognition of any principle that is disputed by any considerable number of American citizens. The name chosen for themselves by the "306" is suggestive of the devotion of a body guard to the personal fortunes of a commander no matter what he is doing. The course those men followed at the Chicago convention was like that of an army trying to defeat as enemies the people sent to confer together as to what was best for the republican party. Their doings were conscienceless; they sought by a perverted firmness that was a sort of stubbornness to coerce the majority into a surrender, and nominate one who was not the choice of the great body of republicans. The movement for the third term has never been anything but a personal one, and the mere fact that the political cliques which have the least hold upon the good will of the people, are its strongest advocates and are now working for it as hard as they can, increases the fears felt for the future. Not an empire in name, but one in fact, is exactly what they seem to be laboring for. The third term movement has been imperial in its nature, and though once crushed, has received a new lease of life on account of the act of an assassin. It is a question that will arouse and engross public interest and one that should be once more and emphatically settled in the negative, forever

LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,
120 Broadway, New York.

LIFE INSURANCE PROFITS DEMONSTRATED BY ACTUAL SETTLEMENTS
MADE PRIOR TO 1882,

The Society is now paying maturing Tontine Policies with the following remarkable results:

POLICIES CARRIED TEN YEARS WITH THE RETURN OF ALL PREMIUMS PAID AND INTEREST THEREON.

1st Example: Policy No 42,563, issued May 26, 1869. Amount ... $10,000 00
Total premiums paid (11 years) ... 5,234 60
The assured was entitled to draw in cash, $6,455.00 having had besides $10,000 of assurance for eleven years, 115 per cent. of premiums paid, returnable in cash

This example and those which follow show that

LARGER PROFITS ARE PAID POLICY-HOLDERS THAN ARE NOW DECLARED BY ANY OTHER COMPANY.

2d Example: Policy No. 58,643, issued Dec. 30, 1870. Endowment 20 years. Tontine Period ten years. Amount ... $10,000 00
Total premiums paid (10 years) ... 7,839 00
The assured on Dec. 30, 1880, was entitled to draw in cash, $9,031 40, 120 per cent of the premiums paid
These results, although predicted by carefully made estimates, are

NOT ESTIMATES, BUT ACTUAL CASH RETURNS.

3d Example: Policy No. 41,621, issued March 27, 1860. Amount ... $5,000 00
Total premiums paid ... 2,908 95
In this case the assured withdrew, March 27, 1880, in cash, $3,312 45, being 114 per cent. of premiums paid.
Many policies will be thus paid in 1882, showing

CASH RETURNS OF FROM 100 TO 120 PER CENT. OF THE PREMIUMS PAID.

Assets securely invested of $43,000,000. Surplus, nearly $10,000,000. The Society's popularity is shown by the fact that for the past eleven years the total amount of new policies issued has been greater than that of any other company in existence, thus making its average

ANNUAL NEW BUSINESS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER COMPANY.

The Society pays death claims promptly and in full. Its policies are clear and concise, and with no unreasonable conditions

EVERY POLICY BECOMES INCONTESTABLE AFTER THREE YEARS.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB 15 1882

CALL FOR TARIFF REFORM

Senator Sherman himself a protectionist, in a recent speech pointed out some of the incongruities of our tariff system. Of the duties on iron and steel he said

When the Morrill tariff bill passed all the steel used in this country was imported. It cost more than three times as much as iron. The duties were based upon these ideas. A rate of duty was put upon steel proportioned to the value of the commodity, so that the duty on steel would bear some relation to the duty on iron. Now by new inventions all that has passed away. Like Aladdin's lamp the Bessemer process, the Siemens process and various forms and modes of making steel have reduced the cost and value of steel. Steel can now be made cheaper than some kinds of iron. You can make steel rails cheaper than iron rails because the metal is carried through all the processes from the pig to the end of the manufacture as completed steel rails at less expense than the ordinary way of converting the pig into bloom and then into bars and rails and other forms of merchantable iron. We should admit promptly that the tariff law is imperfect in regard to the relative duties on steel and iron.

But these incongruities of the system are not to be removed. The steel monopoly intrenched in power, refuses to allow revision of the tariff in the ready way by act of congress but proposes a commission, which may be ready to report two or four years hence, or may never be ready. The object clearly is first, to delay action on the subject as long as possible, and second, to secure a report from the commission which would defend the existing system and afford no relief to the country. Congress is controlled by the combined monopolies which are enabled by the laws to fleece and plunder the people, and what is even more discouraging is the fact that large numbers of the people are deluded and misled by the shallow sophistries put forth as arguments in support of the system by the beneficiaries of it.

It is amazing that any one should believe that these beneficiaries of the system are insisting on its maintenance out of purely philanthropic motives. Their assertion that the laboring classes are interested in maintenance of a high tariff is just what might be expected from that source. It is an essential part of the deception. If you are going to rob a man with his consent, and not only have him satisfied with it but even enthusiastic about it, you must first make the worst appear to him the better reason. Otherwise there will be trouble with him. No imposition is too gross to catch stupid people; and herein lies the great strength of our "glorious protective system." Judging from the census returns, there are now probably three and a half millions of persons engaged in or connected with manufactures and mechanical and mining industries in the United States. Now protection requires that forty-six and a half millions of people shall be taxed in order that these three million and a half should have better wages. That is the theory of protection, not the fact. The fact is that it does not improve the condition of the three million and a half, while it does impose heavy burdens on all the rest. For example, in order that five eastern manufacturing firms should be bolstered up, the price of steel, of which immense quantities are used, is doubled. Its effect is to make the shipper and passenger on all the railroads pay increased rates and to keep down the wages of railroad employes; to increase the cost of the farmer's tools and machinery, and at the same time to erect a barrier between him and the foreign consumer to whom his surplus products must be sold. It must be remembered, however, that protection does not protect a tithe of all the persons employed in manufacturing and mechanical industries. Its immediate benefits are limited to the lines of industry bolstered up by it, and which therefore employ more hands than they otherwise might do. This is a very small proportion of the three and a half millions; probably not more than one million all told.

It is neither honest nor philosophical to tell the working classes that their interests are bound up with protection, and it is politically imprudent, for the reason that the agricultural class is very much larger than the manufacturing and mechanical, and that its interests are most assuredly not identical with those of the protectionists. The necessity of tariff reform has been growing clearer for several years to all candid observers of national progress, and even the protected manufacturers have seemed to realize that they could not much longer hope to fatten upon forced contributions and confiscations from the country at large. Removal of obstructions to trade is the natural philosophy of all who gain their living by work, though they are very apt to mistake their true interests. Protection is a legalized form of robbery, which diminishes the purchasing power of the wages of "protected" labor by artificially enhancing prices, which makes the farmer foot the bills of the manufacturer, which robs Peter to pay Paul, which restricts production and commerce and which therefore is opposed to every rational and enlightened system of fiscal and industrial science. The question is now, how much longer will this national abuse be upheld? No part of the country is pressed by it on the whole so severely as ours. We labor under all disadvantages which it creates, and have no share in its compensations, such as they are.

THE GERMAN IMMIGRATION.

The causes of the great exodus of Germans to America are compulsory military service, reduced pay of labor and high prices of food. These burdens, contrasted with the freedom and prosperity of America, become more burdensome, and almost every young workman looks longingly across the seas and hopes some time to find a home there.

Consul Potter, of Crefeld, has recently given the state department at Washington some interesting statistics upon the pay of labor employed in manufactures throughout the German empire. At Crefeld plasterers work eleven hours per day, and their pay is $6 43 per week; journeymen mechanics work eleven hours and receive $5 per week; carpenters work eleven hours and receive from $3 57 to $4 70 per week, locksmiths work eleven hours and receive $4 29 per week; tailors work twelve hours and receive $1 43 per week, with board and lodging; boot and shoe makers work twelve hours and receive $1 43 with board and lodging. The wages of common labor without board are $4 per week, and there are eleven working hours in each day. These rates are above the average for the German cities. Food prices do not differ greatly from Portland quotations. Eggs are worth 19 cents per doz butter, 23 cents per pound; bread 5 cents per half pound loaf, and other prices in proportion.

The ship loads continually arriving are largely made up of the middle classes and the most hardy and ambitious of the German peasantry. There is evidently a greater percentage of skilled laborers, mechanics and others of the producing class, such as muscular young men and women accustomed to farm and other outdoor work. It is noticeable that there is a larger centage than usual of scientific men and others of the educated classes and it is remarked that the emigrants have better outfits than formerly and scarcely any of them are without some ready cash. Notwithstanding the tremendous impetus that has been given to emigration during the past year or two, it is reported that tens of thousands of small property holders are ready and anxious to come, and would emigrate at once could they dispose of their interests at anything like reasonable figures.

A bill has been introduced in the Mississippi legislature providing stringent punishment for any one engaged in prize fighting, and in case one party is killed, the one causing his death is to be tried for murder. If such a law can be passed and executed, Mississippi can show progress with any of her sisters.

THE EDMUNDS BILL

In the refusal of the senate to take up the Edmunds bill reported to-day there is a significant indication of the reluctance of congress to deal in a decisive way with the Mormon abuse. The whole country is loudly demanding the abatement of this nuisance and yet congress palters delays and refuses to act. This hesitation almost justifies the assertion heretofore made that the Mormons have succeeded in intimidating members by their well known method of collecting information regarding the social delinquencies of public men.

The Edmunds bill is a radical measure. Its most effective provision is a section which prohibits adherents of Mormonism and all polygamists from sitting on juries and disfranchises all bigamists polygamists and those who unlawfully cohabit including Mormon women who now have the right of suffrage by the law of Utah. This last measure would at once revolutionize the territorial legislature and put all local power in the hands of the enemies of Mormonism. The bill further provides that every elective office in the territory shall be immediately vacated and that the president shall appoint a board of five persons who shall attend to the whole business of holding a new election receiving and rejecting votes and placing a newly elected legislature in condition for actual work. This legislature shall then proceed to act as it thinks proper, consistently with the organic laws, to make provision for the filling of the vacant offices.

The scheme is thorough. Mr Edmunds in pressing it has the support of the country. Congress ought to act. These dilatory measures suggest a doubt whether there is courage in congress to do what the country requires.

A recent report of consul Halderman of Bangkok gives an account of the cremation of the late queen of Siam and her infant child who were drowned in the Menam river. The preparations for the ceremonies were on a grand scale, costing, it is said, half a million dollars, and the exercises extended through eleven days. They consisted of religious rites after the Buddhist faith, processions, races, tournaments, tilting, boxing, wrestling, theatrical performances, games, fireworks, etc. Each day the king distributed, as gifts among the assembled thousands, large numbers of small Siamese gold and silver coins and lottery tickets encased in limes and wooden balls, which were eagerly struggled for alike by rich and poor, bond and free, peer and peasant. The remains of the late queen and princess were borne in a catafalque and procession with great pomp and ceremony from their temporary resting place in the palace to the Pramane, or cremation building, where they were placed upon the funeral pile. The king applied the torch and lighted the pyre, amid the lamentations of wailing women, children and priests. His majesty was visibly affected and gave expression to his great sorrow. On the following day the ashes were collected and consigned to the Menam river. The unconsumed bone relics were inurned in golden vessels and deposited with those of the royal family. The diplomatic and consular corps had been specially invited by the king to witness these ceremonies, and throughout the same, attended by foreign ministers, they occupied choice positions for comfort and observation.

Mines listed on the San Francisco stock board are making large demands on unhappy stockholders these days. Total assessments payable this month are $1,030,600. Of this vast amount the famous California mine is down for $106,000, and the Sierra Nevada for $109,000. Nearly every mine on the Comstock is in the same category. Consolidated Virginia will report an assessment delinquent next month. With many stockholders, indeed most of them, the thing is getting rather monotonous. It will be a fortunate day when the whole scheme of speculation and robbery that centers in the Comstock mine shall explode, never to be put on its feet again. It has proven a greater curse to the Pacific coast, ten times over, than the presence of the Chinese has been.

One result of the protracted war of railroad rates in the east has been to diminish seriously the grain receipts of Baltimore, the report for the year 1881 showing a decrease of 15,481,136 bushels in receipts of wheat and 14,000,000 bushels in exports. This falling-off is partly to be accounted for by the large shipments by the barge lines down the Mississippi river, but is chiefly due to competition in railroad freight rates, which has taken the grain to New York and Philadelphia.

No other question affecting the material interests of the whole northwest is of so much importance as the preservation of the Northern Pacific railway land grant for the object to which it was devoted. Hence the memorial on the subject by the Portland board of trade is proper and timely as it is forcible and just.

The Calvary Baptist church of New York has paid $150,000 for a lot on Fifty-seventh street 160 by 100 feet, which, when Central Park was laid out (in 1856) was valued at only $8600. Its tremendous rise in value is largely due to the creation of Central Park.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN

WASHINGTON Feb 14—Midnight —Indications for North Pacific coast region, rainy weather

BRUTAL ASSAULT —About half past two yesterday afternoon, Wm Harrigan a longshoreman was taken to St Vincent's hospital with his face badly bruised and suffering from heavy kicks or blows received in the abdomen Nothing was heard of it about town until nine o'clock when an OREGONIAN reporter went to the hospital and learned the facts concerning him as follows The sister in charge said that he had been brought there in an express wagon at the time above stated, in an unconscious condition by three young men These men refused to give their names, tell what had befallen the injured man where the accident had taken place, who he was or in fact anything except that they wanted him locked after As soon as they got him into the house they immediately hurried away Dr Henry Jones was called and after examination thought the man was fatally injured The wounds on his face although severe are not at all dangerous About 10 o'clock a conversation was begun with Harrigan but he was partially unconscious, and it was necessary to prompt him to enable him to talk connectedly His statement was in substance That he assisted by a man named Walton, were loading wheat in drays at Greenwich dock, when a strange man came up, and began making light of the manner in which he (Harrigan) handled the grain A quarrel sprung up between them, which in a few moments led to blows The strange man was the stronger, and after throwing Harrigan down, kicked him in the face and abdomen. He had a faint recollection of having been put in an express wagon by Walton, Tim Gray and Sam McLaughlin This was all he would tell about the trouble but judging from the way he talked, it seems that he knows who his adversary was, and is trying to protect him It cannot at present be ascertained exactly how seriously he has been injured. At a late hour last night he was suffering intensely, the pain being in the region of the abdomen. He is about 50 years old and has no family

THE BRIDGE ACCIDENT —No inquest was held on the body of J. G. Smith, killed in the bridge accident at Sullivan's gulch Monday His brother was at work there at the time, and being satisfied that no element of carelessness on the part of employers existed, requested that no investigation be held. The body was sent to Hillsboro this morning An examination of the bents by the supervising engineer yesterday, showed that the timbers were rotten through and through, and could be crushed with the naked hand. In one piece, there was not a quarter of an inch thickness of sound wood. The wonder is that the shell had not fallen sooner. The structure was about 200 feet long and seemed to have been held in place by the roadway above; for when the five men had removed the floor and stringers at a point 60 feet from the east end, the bent fell towards the east and knocked down every other bent between it and the wall of the gulch. The bridge, which was built in 1872 or 1873, should have been condemned long ago. It will be well enough for the county commissioners to order a thorough examination of every bridge in Multnomah which has stood more than seven years. A gentleman competent to judge, said to an OREGONIAN reporter yesterday that the Fourth street bridge over Sullivan's gulch is very little stronger than the one which fell.

TRACK LAYING.—Yesterday the force of track layers of the O. R. & N. Co. had put down seven miles of rails out from Umatilla and were advancing at the rate of one mile per day At the twenty mile stake the first crossing of the Umatilla river will be made. This requires about one thousand feet of trestle approach and a Howe Truss span of 155 feet. With no accident the river can be crossed in thirty days from the time it is reached. The gap between the Cascades and The Dalles is now less than nine miles, and will be closed, barring unforeseen delays, in three weeks. Arrangements for track laying could not be better The entire force board and sleep on a train specially prepared for them, and are transported during the night without the loss of an hour's time. For example, they could quit work at Umatilla to-night, get aboard the train and be near Hood river before breakfast to-morrow morning, "and not miss a meal nor pay a cent for the ride."

A TRIPLE LECTURE —There is to be a "Symposium," in the Social Science lecture course, this evening—of a one-sided kind, however. When the appointment of Mr. Scott for the theme of civil service reform was given up by him through unavoidable cause, the committee, in the limit of time left to provide the promised lecture, hit upon the plan of inviting three gentlemen, to take up in succession the interesting stages of the theme, and so cover the ground of a full lecture. They were so fortunate as to secure gentlemen whose unquestioned ability insure a careful and rich presentation of this vital question of our age "How Great Britain reformed her Civil Service," "How America fell into the limbo of office brokerage and patronage," and "How we are to escape it," are the topics to be successively presented this evening by Mr Sears, Mr. Gilbert and Col. Ellinger, the first paper, promptly at 7.30 o'clock

I. O. G. T. INSTALLATION.—Excelsior Degree Temple held a public installation of officers at the hall of Lily Lodge, East Portland, last night, and the following officers were installed by County Deputy Z T. Wright D. T., J W Shaver; D. V T., Ella Reynolds; D S., Lou Powell; D. A. S., H Hembree, D. treasurer, A. Barrell D F S, Drury Masse; D. C., Ella Hill, D. M., P Hill D. D. M., Belle Casse, D. G., I. Watson; D Sen., W. McCalla, D. R. H. S., Mrs. A. Hicklin; D. L. H. S., Mary McCalla. After installation Lily Lodge gave a pleasant social comprising reading, recitations, singing, instrumental music and refreshments.

FATAL ACCIDENT. — Yesterday morning Henry Frank, a carpenter in the employ of the O. R. & N Co. at Eagle creek bridge, two miles above the Lower Cascades, fell from the superstructure and struck his head against a timber below, fracturing his skull. He died four hours afterwards. Frank came here from San Francisco about one month ago and has worked for the company ever since. He is thought to have no relations in this state. The body will be brought here this afternoon for burial.

PROBABLY INDICTED FOR FORGERY.—Frank E. Booth was arraigned in Justice Davis' court yesterday to undergo an examination on a charge of forgery, preferred by his brother-in-law, John Winter. The examination was postponed until to-day at 2 o'clock. It was reported last evening that the grand jury had already indicted him. If so there will be no continuation of the examination. The parties concerned are residents of Yamhill county.

THAT WRECK.—A telegram from Seattle yesterday announces the arrival of the Geo. W. Elder in the straits of Fuca. Another telegram from San Francisco says that every northern coasting steamer is accounted for. The theory gains ground that the wreck reported off Mendocino is the bark Rainier, which some passing vessel set fire to in order to sink her.

ROW IN A RESTAURANT.—Freeman H. Kendall was yesterday arrested on a charge of assault and battery, preferred by Joseph Feldhousen, who stated that Kendall had beaten him in Voos' restaurant, on First street, between Stark and Oak, the night previous. Kendall was given a jury trial and acquitted.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.—Friday morning of last week, J. J. Farrell, owner of the saw mill at Cutting's mills, Clackamas county, was killed by an embankment under which he was working caving in on him. He was thirty-four years old and leaves a wife and four children.

DEATH FROM HEART DISEASE —Frank Needham, age 24, a native of Island Pond, Essex county, Vermont, died from heart disease at St Vincent's Hospital late yesterday evening He has been in the employ of the O R & N Co, and was taken to the hospital Jan. 27th

SENTENCED.—Yesterday morning John Bergman, who stole several boxes of cigars, some liquor and coin from Schmidt & Stein's saloon on First street, plead guilty in the state circuit court and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

MEETING — The Ladies Mite Society of St. Stephen's chapel will meet this afternoon at two o'clock at the house of Mrs Rosenberg corner of Market and Seventh streets Punctual attendance desired

U. S CIRCUIT COURT —Judge Deady will deliver an opinion in this court this morning upon the demurrer to the answer in the U S. vs Thomas B Odeneal.

BARMAN RELEASED —A dispatch to THE OREGONIAN from San Francisco says that Isaac Barman was released yesterday, having given bonds in the sum of $12,000

The 20th annual ball of the Washington Guard will be given at the Turn Halle on the eve of February 22

BRADLEY ARRESTED

While Stepping Ashore from the Steamer Idaho Yesterday.

INTERESTING INTERVIEW BY THE OREGONIAN'S CORRESPONDENT

"Either a Wronged Woman or a Consummate Actress" Sullivan Promises to Testify at the Proper Time

The excitement over the alleged murder of Brown [illegible] early yesterday morning a greater number of people than usual [illegible] the vicinity of Bradley's house. They afterward increased to a crowd extending the entire length of the block when it was learned that the vault [illegible] was to be emptied with the expectation of bringing other murders to light. The crowd [illegible] others [illegible] way and said very little

The vault was almost entirely emptied and the refuse matter hauled away by dusk last evening, but no traces of crime were brought to light

Constable Simmons returned from Salem yesterday with requisitions for Bradley, Hamilton, Sullivan and Mahone and left for San Francisco by the State last night Thinking that Hamilton is in Arizona the requisition for him was addressed to the governor of that territory. Simmons will if possible return with Bradley, Sullivan and Mahone by the Oregon which sails Saturday

BRADLEY'S ARREST

The following dispatch was received by THE OREGONIAN at noon yesterday and its contents were eagerly—nay joyfully—discussed by the thousands who have [illegible] nothing else to talk about since Saturday

SAN FRANCISCO Feb 14 —Carrie Bradley was arrested on the arrival of the steamer Idaho Capt Lees with detectives [illegible] Bohen and Meagher awaited her arrival at the wharf She came in at about 12 o'clock and officers immediately boarded her They found Carrie Bradley, who was traveling under the assumed name of Mrs McMurtha She was brought to the station house and identified by persons who knew her The explanation she gave for traveling under an assumed name was to save annoyance on the boat She denies all knowledge of the murder, as well as of the murdered man, who she declares was never in her house to her knowledge She acknowledges to having kept a house of ill repute, and says there were several indictments against her in Portland for keeping the house, that she pleaded guilty to one and paid a fine of $100 and costs amounting to $30 and the other indictments were dismissed by the district attorney. She says she has been for some time a sufferer from acute rheumatism, and was coming south to find relief in a change of climate, and that her leaving was not clandestine She says the two women who implicate her are the very worst of characters and very intemperate

BRADLEY INTERVIEWED.

She is Very Nonchalant, and Thinks Adams and Flippen are Bad Girls.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb 14.—The sensational circumstances surrounding the arrest of Carrie Bradley of Portland, a courtezan, arrested on a charge of murdering John N Brown, induced your reporter to seek an interview with the prisoner this afternoon On reaching the door of tank No. 4 in the new prison, the Bradley, a stout florid woman of about 50, with light brown hair drawn straight back from her face, bearing the stigma of her calling, and cool steady grayish blue eyes, was discovered She was dressed in shabby negligee with a general air of looseness about it, comporting with the character of the wearer, and leaning against the wall of the cell with her heels elevated on a bench, in an attitude more suggestive of comfort than culture On being informed that the object of the reporter's visit was to hear what she had to say regarding the murder of Brown, she replied with the graceful ease and self possession of her class, that she was glad to receive callers as she was very lonesome, but that regarding the affair in question she had nothing to say, except that she knew nothing about it Showing, however, no disposition to be reticent, she presently stated in response to questions that undoubtedly the whole sensation was the work of her enemies in Portland Mollie Flippen and Dolly Adams, inmates in her house who had testified against her before the grand jury, were a bad lot, the former especially was one of the worst of her kind and that Mollie was certainly crazy, especially when she had a little whisky on board "Why," said she, "that girl under the influence of liquor would tell stories about my house and me that would make the town's hair stand on end She would say anything then I don't think she wanted to do me any injury It was just her craziness Some time ago while she was in my house, she got to drinking and got so bad that I had to call a doctor in He said she was crazy and would have to go to the asylum pretty quick unless she got better, but she might pull through if well cared for Well, I put her to bed in my own room and stood over her day and night until she was well again and I was down sick and I've been sick ever since As to Dolly Adams, she is my enemy She was jealous of me because she thought I was too thick with her lover Now, the fact is I didn't care anything about him in that way but don't you know that sometimes you'll meet a person that you feel as though you could tell all your affairs to, that would be a sort of brother to you, that's just the way with me and him; but Dolly thought different and she said these things about me to get even with me."

After this essay upon platonic affection the Bradley proceeded to show the position of her house, that it would be highly improbable that the body of a murdered man could be conveyed from the premises to the river without detection The house is situated in the most frequented part of town, and a party with such a load would have to run the gauntlet of saloons, hotel watchmen and other obstacles and would be sure to result in discovery.

Thus far the interview on the part of Bradley had been conducted with the coolest and steadiest nonchalance, every word, glance and movement indicating a composed mind and perfect freedom from apprehension or even natural concern. Just before making his visit your reporter had received a dispatch from Portland announcing that testimony before the grand jury had leaked out to the effect that Welch, the saddler, who disappeared some four months ago had been murdered in Bradley's house, the body cut up and thrown into the vault.

This testimony, of course, would be news to the prisoner, and the reporter suddenly, but in a quiet and natural manner asked, "How about Welch, the saddler?" The prisoner was sitting at that moment with eyes cast down in her lap. She allowed them to remain there for a few moments, then raising them slowly and casting a steady, level glance at the reporter she replied in quiet, measured tones, no tremor of lip or eyelid, motion of feature, or tone of voice betrayed the slightest discomposure, but a nervous working of fingers and uneasy movements of hands indicated agitation not before noticeable Whether this proceeded from consciousness of guilt or simply concern at the extent to which charges against her seemed to be pushed, must remain for the present an open question. "Welch, she said, "has not been about my house for a long time I did not want him to come there. He was a man that always made trouble about the house and I finally drove him away" On being informed of the nature of the latest news she replied "Well, that beats all. So they lay Welch's disappearance to me, too I don't know what will come next" Some desultory conversation followed regarding the arrangement of her premises, and after a moment's pause she said "And so they are going to search the vault?" After musing for a moment on either the folly or import ance of that proceeding, the prisoner in response to an inquiry gave her reasons for leaving Portland by the route she had taken, change of name, etc. "You see, I had been very sick and I found it very necessary to leave Portland on account of my health The prisoner's appearance and the remains of a square meal on a tray beside her indicated a rather healthy invalid though appearances are often deceitful "I have been used up with rheumatism and a bad cough which threatened to end in consumption I went by way of Puget Sound instead of taking the regular San Francisco steamer from Portland because I wanted to take a look at that country and also wanted to see Miss Bell, a friend of mine who was up there Besides I dreaded crossing the Columbia river bar and changed my name because everybody knows me and I didn't want to be bothered by them on the steamer You know how that is I've broken up my house in Portland and thought I would come here and get a little room and rest I could live cheap that way you know and didn't know but I might want to go down to Los Angeles or some other place in the southern part of the state and get all well again

After some further general remarks upon her case she expressed the belief that she would get out of the scrape without much trouble and the reporter retired convinced that Bradley was either a much wronged woman or a consummate actress

REPORTING PROGRESS.

MAYOR THOMPSON'S LETTER FROM WASHINGTON

Good Prospects for a Large Appropriation for the Columbia River Bar—"Snake Lights" for the River Etc, Etc.

Following is the letter from Mayor Thompson read at the board of trade meeting Monday night

WASHINGTON CITY Jan 30 [illegible]

Donald Macleay Esq President of the Portland Board of Trade Dear Sir I have been here [illegible] weeks I wrote to Mr Arnold the secretary of the board of trade some days ago giving a statement of progress here Gen Wright the chief of engineer department is very willing to aid us to the best of his ability in securing appropriations for the Willamette and Columbia rivers but is opposed to [illegible] with suspicion on the appropriation for the Columbia river bar because of the adverse report made by the New York board of engineers [illegible] a long talk with him to day on the subject and find he has somewhat modified his views on that matter I am in hopes we will be able to get a favorable statement from him yet on that item in the river and harbor appropriation bill

Gen Hazen has adopted Cape Hancock [illegible] station in place of Tillamook rock and but one thing remains now and that is to get $10,000 appropriated to establish it I have but little doubt that it will be done Lieut Wildman has written letter to Gen Hazen recommending Cape Hancock

On my way down the Columbia in the steamer Columbia Capt Bolles called my attention to the necessity of stake lights at Walkers Island and Martins Island two at the mouth of the Willamette one at Post Office and two at Swan Island bar The six to cost not more than $900 I called on the chief of the lighthouse board and was informed that he has agreed to recommend them and I hope to ask an appropriation of $4000 for the support of these six stake lights Our representative and senators will all [illegible] for the appropriation

On receipt of your telegram for me to telegraph you one thousand dollars of the amount appropriated for securing appropriations for the rivers and bar I sent a telegram to Mr Spencer cashier of the Portland Savings Bank to pay to the order of the board of trade that amount I called on the secretary of war in relation to having the work continued as long as expenses were paid by private parties and was promised it should be done but it was not [illegible] On receipt of your telegram of yesterday (Sunday) I immediately prepared a statement for Gen Wright and early this morning called on him and succeeded in getting a telegram to Capt Powell to continue work with private subscription I also sent you a telegram that my expenses would not exceed nine hundred ($900) dollars and that the balance of the money subscribed could be used I shall use no more than $900 so you can dispose of the balance as the board of trade sees fit I have had the address of the board of trade printed, 2000 copies, and distributed among the members of the house and senate I have seen most of the leading members and receive most flattering assurances of support Representative George and Senator Slater are very active and will do all within their power for us I presume Senator Grover will do what he can Delegate Brents will also assist in anything possible

Congressman Page, chairman of committee on commerce, will I am assured by him, favor us in this matter as also Senators Miller and Farley, of California, who are especially friendly. Ex-Attorney-General Williams will also add his valuable assistance, also ex Senator Mitchell, who is also here, and will do all he can for our aid I have furnished these gentlemen with a number of copies of the address of the board of trade I have sent a number to the members of the board of trade at Portland I will go to New York in a few days and see Mr. Villard on this subject. Senator Windom will add his great influence in our behalf, and he possesses more influence perhaps in this respect than any member of the senate

I have not yet had time to go to Philadelphia to see the tugs there, but will within a week and let you know the price and the power of the tugs and their adaptability for our waters

I have called the attention of our representative and senators to the telegram you sent me in relation to the bankrupt law

I feel very sanguine of our being able to get a large appropriation for our rivers and the bar of the Columbia, which in my opinion, is of more importance than the rivers because the city of Portland can raise the money to clear the river if absolutely necessary, while the "bar" is beyond our means

From the way business is progressing, I can see no reason why I should stay here longer than the 18th of February In all probability the river and harbor bill will be ready to report to the house by that time, and then I can do no more The committee commenced work on it to day There will be no sub committees as were supposed and as is usual, but all subjects will be considered in full committee I have imparted all information to the committee that I can to the members individually, and will press our matters on them whenever opportunity offers Representative George has prepared a speech on the subject of "Columbia River Bar improvements, which I think covers all that can be said on the subject You need not write me after receipt of this letter, but should you wish to communicate by telegraph, do so up to the 18th I am very respectfully your obedient servant,

D P THOMPSON

A Misprint.

The Spectator An Irish ecclesiastical student, who went to finish his course of theology in Spain, sent a glowing account of his journey in letters to a newspaper in his native town His last letter concluded thus "I can write no more, for before my vision rise the gorgeous domes of Salamanca" The printer gave his enthusiasm another direction, for he printed "dames" instead of "domes," to the horror of the bishop, who at once prohibited the publication of any further letters from that distracted young man

THE ÆSTHETE.

PUNCH.

I have decked my dim-lit bower
With the peacock's plumes I love,
And the dado's dark below,
And the freize is faint above;
I have decked my dim rich bower
And the last sweet style of Art
With pale plants in a row—
I have made my chamber smart.

The slender tables stand
On waxed and matted floor;
The convex mirrors gleam,
The horse-cloth drapes the door;
'Twas Botticelli's hand
Drew Venus there, so sweet!
I sit, as in a dream,
Close huddled at her feet.

Oh, let me be intense!
I pine, I yearn, I fade,
And my hair hangs o'er my brow,
And my necktie's disarrayed!
My soul is so intense, immense,
My culture is so vast,
I sometimes fancy—who knows how?—
That I shall burst at last!

THE LOVERS' QUARREL.

"Miss Tillie, Miss Tillie!"

"Yes."

"He's an old bachelor, Susan Kite says."

"Mercy on us, Kizzy Jones. Who's an old bachelor?"

Miss Tillie Bell, who had been meditating deeply as to whether scarlet, orange or green would be best to begin with in working a motto, had evidently not paid due heed to the opening remarks of her handmaid.

Kizzy gave her broom a flourish and replied to her mistress' question.

"The feller that's took the cottage back yonder on the hill. I don't reckon he's overly young. He's kinder gray, but not very, just a leetle grain; and, what do you think he's been a-doin' all the mornin'?"

"Goodness me, Keziah, how should I know?"

"Been a-plantin' marigolds in his front yard all the blessed mornin'. Bought a whole lot of packages of seed, Susan said, every one marigolds."

"Dear me, what a funny man!" said Miss Bell.

But as Kizzy hung up the broom and disappeared, the large cardboard motto slid on to the floor on the one side of her and the skeins of worsted on the other, all in a tangle of vivid color, and Miss Tillie forgot them, forgot the present entirely, and sat with her hands folded and her soft eyes looking out to the line of hills across the fields.

It was the word "marigolds" that had sent her thoughts wandering, so often will one simple word waken a whole train of recollections.

There was sadness mingled with these freshly stirred remembrances—a sadness that had come to her through her first and only romance. Now she was pretty and pink and plump. Then she was slender and pale; and Joe Gifford had seen the wide world in her eyes, and there had been promises and an engagement ring, and a little brown cottage bought back on the hill, with a funny, straggly, redbud tree in a corner of the bit of front yard, and Tillie, who had very little money of her own, in those days invested three pence in a paper of marigold seed to beautify the yard.

"For," she said, "marigolds are such a hearty, jolly kind of flowers. There is so much satisfaction in them."

But just as they had come up and began to bloom in huge brilliant masses of golden-yellow and velvet-soft red-brown, three weeks before the wedding day, what was it took all the light out of them—all the suggestive beauty and sweetness out of the brown cottage?

What, but a horrible quarrel with Joe—a quarrel in which they had both acted with the wisdom and common sense of a couple of belligerent children fighting over something as important as a rag doll, and breathing threats against each other.

And Joe had wound it all up by repairing to the brown cottage in a terrible temper and pulling up every marigold by the roots, throwing them spitefully across the street as near Tillie's home as possible, where they lay, a heap of bright color fading and wilting in the sun.

If a straight slim little figure, in a gray dress, trying to look as much like a shadow as possible, had slipped out of the house in the faint light of a crescent moon and gathered up one little velvet-red marigold from the heap moist with dew, and if that marigold, all dead and dry, was in one of Miss Tillie's boxes up stairs now, why, no one but Tillie had any suspicion of it.

And Joe had sold the cottage and gone away.

"And he can stay away while the world lasts, for all of me," Tillie had said, remembering how he had called her an obstinate little jade, though to be sure she had called him an ogre.

Tillie was a devout little woman, and was bent on walking the narrowest heavenward path she could find, yet her besetting sin of temper would get in her way sometimes and trip her up.

"And as if," she had said, "there was not higher duties in life than thinking of an obstinate goose of a man with a bad temper."

And yet how many tears she had shed over that little dead marigold in the box, Tillie was not so unforgiving as she tried to be.

And now a man had taken the brown cottage on the hill—a bachelor, not "overly" young, who had been planting marigolds all the morning. Well, Joe could not be overly young now. Suppose this man should be Joe?

Kizzy's head was poked inside the door.

"Miss Tillie," said she, "he's agoin' to be married, the fellow with the marigolds is."

As the head disappeared Miss Tillie snapped the thread of her reverie, gave her head an impatient little toss, and, picking up her motto and her wool, began to work briskly.

"Well, well," she half sighed, "if people do their duty there is no doubt that things will come out all right some time."

Kizzy came flying in red and giggling, with some one stalking solemnly behind her.

"Here he is, Miss Tillie, that's him," she cried, choking a titter and pointing to a square-shouldered man in the doorway, whose thick, brown hair was lightly tinged with gray.

It was Joe Gifford, not looking so very different from what he had in the old days.

"Tillie," said he without any preface, "I've come back and bought the cottage again and planted the marigolds. And now don't you think we had better fulfill the contract we broke so long ago?"

"I thought," fluttered Tillie, "Kizzy said——"

"Twasn't me, 'twas Susan Kite said it, when she fetched the milk this evenin'—said her mother Jeff was in the store, and heard the boys a-axin' of him," pointing her elbow to Joe, "if he was a-goin' to git married, and he said: 'You had better reckon I am.'"

"And so I am, if she'll have me," answered Joe, coming forward. "Kizzy, you run and feed the chickens, or the cat, or something, my dear."

And as she disappeared with an unsuppressed giggle Joe went straight up to Tillie, and, dropping down beside her chair, tangled her wools all up by catching her hands as she was picking at a knot.

"What impertinence," said Tillie. "Do you suppose I have forgotten what a scamp you were? Have you reformed?"

"I don't know," he answered, seriously. "I have tried. And what does your motto say? 'Charity suffereth long and is kind.' I know you are kind and sweet, Tillie. Dearest Tillie, try me again."

"Ah, Joe," sighed Tillie, "we both have need of heaven's help. If we go there for strength and help we shall learn the lesson to be kind to each other."

"And when shall we be married, Tillie?" Joe asked.

"Oh, not till the marigolds bloom," Tillie answered.

Fishing in the rivers and streams of the Main island is not considered as a sport by the Japanese, but as a means of livelihood, and therefore "the gentle angler" will not receive much encouragement from the brotherhood in the land of the rising sun. Salmon trout, trout, and as (a small but game fish) are "educated," I believe, on some rivers to take the fly. The Japs work with very small flies, fine tackle, slight bamboo rods, with which they are very successful. Altogether, however, the game will be found scarcely worth the candle on the mainland, but capital sport with the salmon trout can be obtained in several streams near Satsuporo, in Yezo, during May and June, with a genuine British fly. The most important export from Yezo is in dried salmon, which are netted in incredible quantities in various rivers of the northern part of the island and in the southern Kuriles; but sport in these rivers among the dense masses of fish is out of the question, even if the proprietors of the fishings would allow their fish to be poached. The Japanese sea-board is everywhere picturesque, and the seas abound with fish, giving employment to the crews of thousands of fishing-boats. When sailing along the coasts, numbers of large black whales and sharks, both large and small, will be seen, the latter being caught by the fishermen as their fins are counted a delicacy and the skins serve many uses. The hilts of all the old swords are covered with white shark's skin.—The London Field.

"How long would it take to go to the moon?" asks an occasional reader. It much depends upon the route you take. If you go by way of a rock blast, or a dynamite upheaval, you would probably arrive in about fifteen minutes, but if you went by the Guiteau trial express, you'd strike it about when the twilight was settling down upon eternity.—Rome Sentinel.

WILTING A LION.

BY BILL NYE.

Many years ago, when the country was new and infested with grizzly bears and the prairie dog, there used to be a couple of mountain lions at the Green river eating house. They were kept in a big iron cage at the east end of the platform, and the average tourist was regaled each day by their ferocious antics.

After awhile Cap. Lang, who kept the house, got tired of the mountain lions, and traded them to a traveling circus for an old and highly respected African lion with false teeth. He was thoroughly under subjection, and had got so docile that he didn't draw any more as a maneater for the circus and they had to feed him cayenne pepper and turpentine to make him scare the women and children on the front seats, in the greatest living aggregation on earth and the only boss double-hump dromedary and ten-elephant show in the known world.

Still he was obedient, and when the lion tamer would pound on the floor of the cage with his foot, the venerable old fraud would open his mouth till you could throw a cookstove into it, and he would gnash his store teeth and roar till the centerpole would tremble and pink lemonade would go up to ten cents a glass.

Well, Cap. Lang established the king of beasts in his new quarters, and by feeding him hotel soup and chopped feed, with a sprinkling of cayenne pepper and ground mustard, continued to make him lively enough to give the overland passengers fifty cents' worth of roar after each meal.

Ira Carrington, who used to brake on a passenger between Laramie and Green river, was also a western curiosity. He didn't work for the company so much on account of the salary as he did for the fun he had lying to the tender foot. If the pay car didn't catch him regularly he didn't care much, but if he failed to pick up a victim every trip and fill him full of the wild and gory west, he went home hurt and despondent.

One day he ran across a passenger in the day coach who was a professional lion tamer from away back. He admitted that he could paralyze an African lion with the cold and cruel glare of his baleful eye. He had met the king of beasts in his tropical home, and wilted him hundreds of times with his double-barrel glitter.

Mr. Carrington then said that when the train got to Green river there would be an opportunity for him to turn loose on a ferocious brute at the hotel. The news rapidly spread among the passengers that a lion tamer from Timbuctoo was on board, who would, on reaching Green river, give a free performance, in which he would enter the cage and pull the lion's tail out by the roots, and throw the bob-tail king of beasts over the eating house.

When the train arrived at Green River, the lion-tamer, with his coat off and a blue cotton handkerchief tied around his head, walked up to the cage with his cruel eye fixed on the lion in a reproachful way, calculated to fill the ferocious monster with remorse.

The entire load of passengers stood with bated breath, wondering whether the brave man would cow the haughty king of the forest or get himself chewed up into Vienna sausages.

At this moment Mr. Carrington, who knew the characteristics of the feeble old circus lion of the present day, pounded on the platform with his foot in a loud and boisterous manner, and the king of beasts responded in a way that did credit to himself and scared the passengers half to death. He opened his mouth so that you could see the basement of his liver, and, lashing the cage with his tail, let off a base solo that pretty near shattered the blue vault of heaven. The hot, fiery breath of the monster came thick and steaming against the cheek of the bold lion-tamer. The red gums and fiery eyes of the mad brute gleamed close to the bars of the cage. The lion-tamer forgot about casting a withering glitter on the lion. In the hurry and excitement it escaped his mind.

Backing slowly away from the cage in order that the king of the forest might recover from his fright, the lion-tamer fell off into a bunch of sagebrush. The crowd then greeted him with round after round of applause. Mr. Carrington took him by the suspender, and rescued him.

The lion-tamer then went into the car. He had no business particularly in the car, but he went in there so that he could be away from the prying eyes of the passengers.

This shows how a truly brave man shuns the approbation and applause of the multitude, and also how a bass-wood lion, stuffed with baled hay, and fitted out with plaster of Paris teeth and a heavy baritone voice, can outglare an ablebodied lion-tamer from Kalamazoo.

FLORAL INSANITY.

A Startling Effort to Prove that Nine-Tenths of Mankind are Lunatics.

The Hour.

A new scientific dogma is proclaimed by an European scientist. He boldly takes the ground that insanity is owing to the universal use of flowers. If mental unsoundness is more widespread now than at any former period, it is because never before has the cultivation and, as he puts it, the mad idolatry of flowers been carried to so extravagant a pitch. But from the earliest times men have always been affected by flowers in a manner utterly inexplicable by their intrinsic qualities. They are not good to eat, not even the cabbage rose. As for the beauty of color and perfume, so vaunted by their insensate adorers, that is a matter of opinion. "My love is like a red, red rose," says a poet—a class which has done more than any other to fasten this deplorable folly upon men. That is all very well; but present a red, red rose to a Texan steer, suggests the professor, and see how he likes it. As to their smell, if some people fancy it, others cannot abide it; to some it is absolutely sickening.

Given the baneful influence of flowers on the human intellect, it is startling to reflect how little chance man has to evade it. From the cradle to the grave, at every step of his life, it besets him. Flowers nearly smother him at his birth; they fairly stifle him at his wedding, and they are only kept from crowing over his coffin, as it were, by the most heart-rendering appeals of his surviving relatives through the public press. Under these terrific odds it is little wonder if four-fifths of the human race have gone mad. Of the multitude of proofs collected but few can be cited. The madness which cost mankind Paradise was due, if not to a flower, certainly to the fruit of a flower. A classic people were so blinded as to worship flowers, as barbarous races worship the devil. At least in one instance history records how a whole nation was plunged into years of a cruel and bloody war over the respective merits of red and white roses.

Erotic madness especially betrays itself through the medium of flowers, as anyone may convince himself by counting the hopeless idiots who are constantly spending their substance in unregarded "floral offerings" to a diva of the stage or belle of the ball-room. Take, too, the typical Englishman. In most other affairs of life no more sensible or hard-headed fellow exists; but the flower craze has seized upon him, and one rarely sees him in the streets without a nosegay the size of a warming-pan in his button-hole. To his superstitious mind, too, it seems to become imbued with some other of the qualities of a warming-pan besides its size, for in the coldest weather he wears it instead of an overcoat. From this wild worship of the boutonniere to the quite utter madness of the æsthete who lunches upon a lily and dines upon a daffodil, is but one downward step. The culmination of floral insanity is to be found in the condemned cell. The women who unsex themselves to cover a coarse and brutal assassin with floral adulation; who fairly weary his last agonies with bouquets and wreathe his gallows with roses, are surely the most deplorable and incurable victims of this most singular mania.

Such are some of the many proofs of the noxious influence of flowers laboriously collated by this scientific observer. It is hoped that their startling nature may so arouse society to the sense of its danger that drawing rooms may, in time, cease to look and smell like hothouses, and a popular belle in a ball-room, will no longer resemble a walking green-grocery by being loaded down with bouquets.

WOMAN AT HOME.—Home is more to a woman than to a man. It is her temple. She is its goddess, its priestess—but oftener its janitor. A man doesn't look so longingly back at the old home, though it never cost him a cent, bought all his clothes and sent him to college. A man likes his home when he gets acquainted in it, because there his stupidity passes for the profoundest wisdom. His jokes are all laughed at (though it needs a glossary to get at their meaning) if he only indicates the laughing place. When a man dies he is wept for at home, but the cold world moves right along as if nothing had happened; fond lovers come to his graveyard, even; wear his tombstone smooth sitting on it, contract bad poetry and worse rheumatism, and burden the air with labial confectionery. I have heard that there were skeletons in many homes. They never [illegible] there unless the [illegible] brought. [illegible] are bad things. There is one [illegible] Christmas present for the husband, for the bill is sure to be sent to him four days before Christmas, so that everything is made lovely and harmonious.—From Burdett's New York Lecture.

The Mexican girl has not the life, the vivacity, the animation of the American girl, but she is very lovely in her way and the best product of the country. She has the most beautiful eyes in the world, with a soft languishing expression in them, for those who like that sort of thing; a good complexion, not rosy but colorless, a magnificent head of hair, and a very shapely head to wear it on, a slim waist and a graceful walk. She is perfectly modest, in fact rather timid, perfectly well bred.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

The Omaha (Neb.) Bee says that if there is any one man who should not succeed Secretary Kirkwood that man is ex-Senator Sargent. "He does not possess," it says, "the confidence of his own state nor that of the people in the west, and his appointment would certainly not be in the line of civil service reform."

It is related of Luther that, watching cattle going into the pastures, he remarked: "Behold there go our preachers, our milkbearers, butterbearers, cheese and wool-bearers, who do daily preach to us faith toward God; that we should trust in Him, as in our loving Father. He careth for us and will sustain us."

Alexandria, princess of Wales, has set in England and one excellent fashion. She has made so public a display of her attachment to her young sons and daughters that it has become the mode for the fashionable British matron similarly to express her affections. Small boys and girls have, it is stated, completely eclipsed toy-terriers and pugs as the pets paraded by ladies in victorias and on foot in Hyde park at the height of the season.

Moribund husband (to æsthetic wife): "Well, Jennie, the doctor says I must soon leave you. Do not grieve. I have provided handsomely for you in my will. You will keep my memory green, won't you, my love?" Æsthetic wife (sobbing): "Dearest, I will see that your grave is kept green also (reflectingly), but not one of those horrid bright colors. A nice olive-gray green, with an old-gold tombstone, will look too awfully lovely for anything."—The Town.

The Parisians have found out how to make false eyelashes. I do not speak of the vulgar and well-known trick of darkening the rim around the eye with all kinds of dirty compositions or the more artistic plan of doing so to the inside of the lid. No, they actually draw a fine needle, threaded with dark hair, through the skin of the eyelid, forming long loops, and after the process is over (I am told it is a painless one) a splendid dark fringe veils the coquette's eyes.—London Truth.

Apropos of Mrs. Pendleton's neat retort that "we import our curiosities," a Philadelphia lady is credited with a remark which rather exceeds it in audacity. At Mr. G. W. Child's reception, in conversation with the wife of a distinguished American diplomat and after a little quizzing as to the class of people who were likely to fall down and worship him, Oscar Wilde is credited with the remark that became to America to teach us "to recognize the beautiful in nature." "Then," said the lady, "you had better cut your hair shorter and your trousers longer!"

Mrs. Jane Grey Swisshelm thus describes her pleasing way of dealing with strangers who have something useful to tell her: "I never receive the statement of a stranger," she says, "as an established fact, and do not hesitate to say in so many words to any one who may credit me with such amiability, 'You need not tell me your story, for I do not know you, and should probably not believe you.'" Further on in her carefully considered remarks she observes: "As between drowning a country girl and getting her employment in the city, I rather think I'd drown her, and so get her out of harm's way."

In good hands: He was a country young fellow, a little awkward and bashful, but of sterling worth of character. She was a Cincinnati belle and had sense enough to appreciate his worth, despite his awkwardness and bashfulness, and was his fiancee. On a gloomy Sunday evening last winter they were standing in front of the window in the parlor of her home, on east Walnut Hills, watching the snow flakes rapidly falling outside. He was not up in society small talk, and, being hard up for something to say, remarked as he watched the snow falling: "This will be hard on the old man's calves and sheep." "Never mind, dear," said she, slipping her arm around him, "I will take care of one of them."—Cincinnati Commercial.

When Mendelssohn visited England the queen and prince consort were so delighted with him that he was invited to Windsor and gave a private concert before her majesty. The queen sat beside him while at her request he played one of his Lieder, and when it was concluded said to him, that in return for the great pleasure he had given her she would like him to ask a favor of her. Mendelssohn immediately replied that he should like to see the royal children in the nursery, and the queen herself conducted him to the part of the castle set aside for the children, chatting to him in German about the homely little details of child life. The great musician afterwards said that this episode was a greater satisfaction to him than all the praise and homage bestowed upon his genius.

Eugenie now describes herself as the "Countess de Pierrefonds, relict of his late Majesty, Napoleon III." She signed that title in her application to the vestry of Farnborough for permission to exchange a right of way which lies across her estate, offering instead of this old highway, which she wishes to make private, a new road, wider and more convenient, at another point. The petition was granted, the more readily as the countess is spending $500,000 on the improvement of the estate which she purchased from Longman, the publisher. The unfortunate Eugenie recently fell down the stairs of her edifice, and was seriously hurt. She is bowed with sorrow, and not free from infirmities, but she comes of a long-lived race, and may yet see a revolution or two in France.

We have heard a French woman of the imperial circle complain that she could not dress for less than £1000 a year. A milliner's bill, on which an action was brought, amounted to £15,000 for three years, and the fair defendant paid £12,000 into court. The case was reported in the Gazette des Tribunaux. This spirit of extravagance proved catching, and extended to England, where traces of it are still discernable. It is not uncommon for a lady at a country house to come down in a morning dress, change it for lawn-tennis or a walk, put on a neglige trimmed with lace for the afternoon tea, and then dress for dinner or a ball. The only parallel in the male sex must be sought among the jeunesse doree who indulge in fancy costumes for the smoking room. Male dress errs on the side of negligence.

Many a foolish girl sacrifices health to vanity. A young friend called on me the other day; it was very cold, but she did not care to draw near the fire; she was quite warm she said; but I saw her slyly pinch her ear, as if to bring back life into the chilled flesh. To be sure, a gay nubia was thrown carelessly around her shoulders, but her ears were not long enough to nestle in its inviting folds, so they had to stand out alone and unpitied. "Wouldn't you like another wrap?" I ventured. "Oh, no; I am not cold at all; I always dress just the same in winter as in summer," she answered with a significant toss of the head. "For pity's sake, child," I said, "don't you wear flannels?" "No, never, they make one look so bungling." So, for fear of not looking as well as vanity desired, the girl exposed her very life. Said a mother to me, "My little girl is getting the rheumatism." "Does she wear flannels?" I asked. "Oh, no; she never has," she replied, and when I suggested that they might act as a preventive, she replied in a very uncertain tone, "possibly they might." Dress yourself and children comfortably. Winter is at best a trying season; do not add to its perils by your own carelessness.

Mr. Wilde has been burlesqued by the New York reporters. After a ten minutes' conversation with him, any good judge of character would report thus: He is ridiculous beyond the common neither in what he does nor in what he says. He belongs to that class of human beings uniting an excessive love of approbation with a watchful eye to the main chance—a type so familiar to everybody that it has never been thought worthy of special study. His affectations and eccentricities are the result of a deliberate and shrewd calculation. He works æsthetics for the purpose, as Mallock works ethics, and with hardly less skill in his way. When Mr. Wilde left Oxford, where had been considered by his fellows as an ordinarily good fellow, he found himself at the front door of a society very much wearied of such young men. His only chance to get a foothold was by hitting upon something quite new, for he had not rank, wealth, personal beauty or great wit to recommend him to notice. He had wit enough, however, to see that it was better to be laughed at than to be ignored. He had a somewhat salacious fancy, and a knack at turning a Swinburnian stanza; so he advisedly set about concentrating, in his personal demeanor and utterances, the sort of thing that can be traced in its growth from a vague origin in Ruskin to a tolerably distinct idea in the contemporary Dantemaniacs. He might have gone in on athletics instead of æsthetics, with the same purpose and a similar result; but Mr. Wilde, although of large frame, is physically flabby.—N. Y. Cor. Phil. Press.

European markets continue depressed and the [illegible] is doing in consequence. The local market is also dull, and although wheat is still quoted at $1 60 per cental, that figure is considered rather above the basis of the market.

Tonnage is decidedly weaker. It is rumored that an iron vessel was taken today at 65s.

Receipts of wheat from the valley are estimated at about 250 tons per day. Wheat from Snake river has just begun to come down and all will be here by the last of March. The whole amount is about 7000 tons.

There is no change in the local produce market except in eggs, which have advanced from 20 to 22½ cents.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN,

The Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast in the Treatment of

ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES.

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE all forms of Disease of the generative organs [illegible] private disease. He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, [illegible] and all diseases caused by the

such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organizations broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Lost Manhood perfectly restored. Catarrh, Bronchitis, Throat Diseases, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Stomach and Bladder, he can cure without fail.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for that.
